"Note to the editor" and "doc to the editor" are idiomatic but a bit clumsy. It sounds like one is writing a letter and the other is maintaining someone's notes in a separate file. Do we have a more elegant word which describes a document kept with the intention of sending it to someone? A: You have two words: case notes and ToC. A case notes is "a collection of notes made for a client." ToC is just "Table of Contents", and a case notes is a note for the client about the content that they should be looking at. {#sp1.343} {#sp2.344} {#sp3.345} {#sp4.346} {#sp5.347} {#sp6.348} {#sp7.349} - 3 7 .
