The problems that Photoshop have Photoshop is a very powerful tool, however it does have many problems. It's expensive! The subscription fees and annual costs are a bit much for most. Some of the monthly fees are very high. $90 for CS6 is too much for most photographers! Prices are inflated Adobe Photoshop has a long history of inflated prices. The company doesn't allow their products to have significant discounts. Inflation of Photoshop's prices is what makes it so expensive. Frequently, Photoshop is compared to Adobe Lightroom. Photographers always complain about this because Lightroom has much cheaper prices and a simpler interface. It's not all about speed. For some of us, Photoshop has many power features like the way blending modes work and the way layers work. Lightroom doesn't have these features, but it's not the case for Photoshop. The native file formats are limited to TIFF, PSD, and JPEG. Other formats like PNG and PDF don't have any way of exporting You need Photoshop to edit and create new image files You need Photoshop to correct mistakes. It's not fully compatible with all versions of Windows Adobe Photoshop is only available for Windows. It's not available for Mac Adobe Photoshop is an exclusive Windows software. It doesn't have any import functionality No way to import images from other software, like Apple's Aperture or Adobe Lightroom. If you regularly work on images using different pieces of software then this could be a problem. It's not easy to learn. Even though Photoshop is powerful and useful, its interface and tutorial videos can be confusing. It lacks a mobile app There is no easy-to-use mobile application for Photoshop. It's not that the mobile apps are that useful. It's not that there is a lack of developers. The mobile apps are just not very good quality. It's getting harder and harder to find any serious Photoshop tutorials on YouTube. They are full of sales pitches and direct you to the company's website. If you can't seem to find any decent tutorials, you are forced to buy a subscription. 388ed7b0c7
